

“Celebrating the Fruits of Non-Violent Struggle”

A 50th anniversary event, dedicated to remembering the birth of the 60s Civil Rights Movement when young people of color in Greensboro, NC decided to sit down and have lunch at an all-white Woolworth’s lunch counter.

featuring The Reverend James M. Lawson

Rev. Lawson was at the forefront of the civil rights struggles of the 1960's as the mentor and leader of students who helped end forced segregation in public places. Rev. Martin Luther King, Jr. called Rev. Lawson "the leading non-violence theorist in the world." Rev. Lawson serves as Chair of the National Advisory Council of the American Civil Liberties Union.

Sunday, January 31 – 8am and 11am - Sermons at St. Luke “Community”
United Methodist Church
5710 East RL Thornton Freeway, Dallas

Monday, February 1 – 5:30 – 9pm - “An Evening of Dramatic Readings and Inspirational Messages”

5:30pm - Reception at The Black Academy of Arts and Letters*
650 South Griffin Street, Dallas

7pm – Keynote Address - The Reverend James M. Lawson

For ticket information call Dallas Peace Center – 214-823-7793

Hosted by the Dallas Peace Center, the African-American Museum and leaders of the Dallas faith community